

大学院共通科目
01ZZ305 英語発表

English Presentations

The ability to communicate effectively to an audience of your peers, is an ability that will serve you well. The powerful speeches of Barack Obama and Steve Jobs took one to the White House and the other to the top of Apple Inc.

Whether motivating a nation, selling iPods, or simply expressing your ideas with clarity, oral communication skills are essential.

Unfortunately though, these are not skills that we are born with. They must be learned, practiced and developed.

This course provides an overview of basic communication theories, and techniques for public speaking and making presentations in English.

Participants will also gain practical experience applying the techniques they have learned to deliver a presentation to the class.

July 18, 25

09:00–16:00

総合研究棟A110
Adv Research Bld A, 110

- Registration by email to ggec@un.tsukuba.ac.jp from May 8
- This course will be conducted in English.
- Reading materials will be distributed via manaba. Students should ensure they are also registered for the course on manaba.tsukuba.ac.jp
- For details about course contents contact Matt Wood mattwood@biol.tsukuba.ac.jp